

SEQUEL TO SEATTLE

How the World Trade Organization's new "services" negotiations
threaten democracy

Scott Sinclair

Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	i
Summary	1
The new priority area of international services.....	2
What is the GATS?	3
The increasing impact of WTO services rules	6
The GATS 2000 agenda	7
Conclusion	12
Introduction	17
Chapter 1: The new priority area of international services	21
Setting the agenda	21
What are services?	22
Why are services important?	23
Why are services the subject of international agreements?	25
Beyond Seattle, the flashpoints ahead	27
Chapter 2: What is the GATS?	29
Scope and Coverage of the GATS	31
"Top-down" features of the GATS	31
"Bottom-up" features of the GATS	35
Chapter 3: The increasing importance of WTO services rules	39
The GATS applies to any government measure.	40
The GATS prohibits de facto discrimination.	41
The mode of service supply is irrelevant in determining whether services or suppliers are "like."	44
The WTO restrictions on goods and services are overlapping.	47
Exemptions, exclusions and exceptions to the GATS will be interpreted narrowly.	51
Conclusion.....	58

Chapter 4: Expanding the WTO services agreement:

What's on the GATS 2000 re-negotiating table?	61
Introduction	61
The GATS 2000 agenda	62
1) Expanding market access commitments	63
2) Domestic regulation	75
3) Safeguards, Subsidies and Government Procurement	81

Chapter 5: Conclusion

93

Endnotes

99

Appendix 1: Sample pages from Canada' schedules

119

Canada - Schedule of specific commitments

119

Appendix 2: Services Sectoral Classification List

123

Appendix 3: Glossary of key GATS terms

131