

It Was Like a Fever

Storytelling in Protest and Politics

FRANC ESC A POLLETTA

The University of Chicago Press Chicago and London

Contents

Preface vii

- 1 Why Stories Matter 1
- 2 "It was like a fever . . .": Why People Protest 32
- 3 Strategy as Metonymy: Why Activists Choose the Strategies They Do 53
- 4 Stories and Reasons: Why Deliberation Is Only Sometimes Democratic 82
- 5 Ways of Knowing and Stories Worth Telling: Why Casting Oneself as a Victim Sometimes Hurts the Cause 109
- 6 Remembering Dr. King on the House and Senate Floor: Why Movements Have the Impacts They Do 141
- 7 Conclusion: Folk Wisdom and Scholarly Tales 166

Notes 189 Index 231