

Aid Relationships in Asia

Exploring Ownership in Japanese and Nordic Aid

Edited by

Alf Morten Jerve, Yasutami Shimomura and Annette Skovsted Hansen

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	ix
Acknowledgements	x
Notes on Contributors	xi
List of Abbreviations	xvii

Part I The Concept of Ownership in the Aid Debate

1	Introduction: Conceptualising Ownership in Aid Relations	3
	Alf Morten Jerve and Annette Skovsted Hansen
	Why this book?	3
	Opening the black box – the aid relationship	5
	‘Ownership’ – by whom?	10
	‘Ownership’ – the Japanese discourse	14
	Japanese and Nordic assistance compared	16
	Conclusion	19
2.	Donor–Recipient Relationships in the Aid Effectiveness Debate	22
	Machiko Nissanke
	Introduction	22
	The selectivity approach to aid allocation as ex-post policy conditionality	24
	Evaluating donor–recipient relationships under the new aid architecture	30
	Concluding remarks	34
3	Ownership of What?: Beyond National Poverty Strategies and Aid Harmonisation in the Case of Vietnam	41
	Izumi Ohno and Kenichi Ohno
	Introduction	41
	Japanese views on ownership – what is true ownership as aspired to by recipient countries?	42
	The context of Vietnam’s aid and development	48

Donor management: selectivity and diversity in dealing with donors	49
Policy design and implementation – need for greater coherency in policy and institutions	54
Future challenges and implications for the role of donors in Vietnam	59

Part II Aid Relations Where Aid Dominates

4 Laos: Contestation of National Ownership – the Role of Aid Relations and the Case of the Electricity Sector Stéphanie Robert and Henrik Secher Marcussen	65
Introduction	65
The external dependency of Laos	66
Defying conventional notions of the state	71
Exercising national ownership while in a squeeze – the case of the hydropower sector	75
Concluding remarks	80
5 Sri Lanka: Exploring ‘Ownership’ of Aid-Funded Projects: a Comparative Study of Japanese, Norwegian and Swedish Project Aid Alf Morten Jerve, W.D. Lakshman and Piyadasa Ratnayake	83
A project approach to the study of ownership in aid relationships	83
Case 1: Dental Faculty of the University of Peradeniya – funded by JICA	86
Case 2: Institute of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, University of Colombo – funded by Sida	92
Case 3: Moneragala District Integrated Rural Development Programme – funded by Norad	99
Case 4: Rural Infrastructure Improvement Project in Walawe Left Bank Area – financed by JBIC	106
Conclusions	111
6 Mongolia: Unpredictable Ownership – Comparing a Japanese and a Swedish Funded Project Lkham Luvsanjamts and Marie Söderberg	116
Introduction	116
Mongolia as an aid recipient	117
Japan and Sweden as donors in Mongolia	120

The Japanese project case: the Mongol–Japan Centre	123
The Swedish project case: the good governance in a democratic Mongolia project	126
Conclusions	130
7. Nepal and Its Donors – Partners in Learning To Cope	133
Sudhindra Sharma, Annette Skovsted Hansen, Tatsuro Fujikura and Juhani Koponen
Introduction	133
Donor responses to political turmoil	134
Aid relationships at the operational level: hydropower and education	142
Conclusions	148
Part III Aid Relations Where Aid Is Marginal
8 China: How Size Matters – a Comparative Study of Ownership in Japanese and Swedish Aid Projects	153
Liping He and Marie Söderberg
Introduction	153
China as an aid recipient: exercising strong ownership	154
Dealing with its biggest donor – Japan	157
At the implementation level: the Sino-Japan Friendship Centre – a grant aid and technical cooperation project	162
Dealing with a small donor – Sweden	163
Conclusion	168
9 Thailand: Legitimacy and Aid Recipient Ownership – the Case of the Export Promotion Strategy	173
Yasutami Shimomura
Introduction	173
A need to transform the structure of exports	174
External assistance to Thailand between 1975 and 1990	176
Developing ‘hardware’ for export promotion: the case of the Eastern Seaboard Development Plan	179
Developing ‘software’ for export promotion: the case of the first White Paper on Thai–Japanese economic relations	185
Conclusion and policy implications	189
10 Vietnam: the Making of Recipient Ownership and Responses to Swedish and Japanese Aid	191
Le Thanh Forsberg

Introduction	191
Ownership: learning from historical experiences of dependency	192
Building recipient ownership: the central role of MPI	194
Diversity among donors: the cases of Sweden and Japan	198
Exercising ownership: playing on comparative advantages	202
Conclusions      ✎	205
 11 Thailand: What Makes Recipient Ownership?: a Comparative Study of Japanese and Danish Aid to Environmental Conservation	  209
Siriporn Wajjwalku and Euamporn Tasarika
Introduction	209
Case 1: The REX Project funded by Japan	211
Case 2: The Bangrong Project funded by Denmark	215
Case 3: The EmSong Project funded by Denmark	217
Conclusion: exploring the link between partnership and ownership	220
 Index	 224