Abstract (German / Deutsch)	ix
1. Introduction: effective management of partnerships in international development – an approach through interagency collaboration	1
1.1 Development of the research interest	1
1.2 Identification of the research gap	2
1.3 Research design	4
1.4 Research findings	5
2. Management of interagency collaboration in international development cooperation: where to start and where to end?	8
2.1 Collaboration in international development cooperation	11
2.1.1 The idea of international development – history and implications	11
2.1.2 Issues influencing the management of international development projects	14
2.1.3 Ownership – a particular issue between the donors and the recipients	19
2.1.4 The reasons for interagency collaboration in international development....	20
2.1.5 Managing interagency collaboration in international development	23
2.1.6 Summary: the need to continue the quest	26
2.2 Managing interagency collaboration: insights for international development cooperation	27
2.2.1 (Public) Management and International Organizations	27
2.2.2 Overarching themes of importance in modeling interagency collaboration	29
2.2.3 Managing collaboration: integrating overarching themes and practice	36
2.2.4 Other management insights with potential for interagency collaboration...	41
2.2.5 Summary: the way towards a sound concept of interagency collaboration	52
2.3 Interagency collaboration and the theory of Eugene Bardach	53
2.3.1 Understanding Bardach's craftsmanship theory	53

2.3.2 Operating system	59
2.3.3 Acquiring resources	61
2.3.4 Steering a course	62
2.3.5 Culture of joint problem solving	63
2.3.6 Developmental dynamics	65
2.3.7 Later development of Bardach's theory	67
2.3.8 Discussion of Bardach's theory: a concept with potential	70
2.3.9 Summary: Bardach's theory as framework to explore interagency collaboration	71
2.4 Conclusion: managing interagency collaboration in international development – research based on Eugene Bardach	72
3. Crafting a conceptual framework – refining the research questions	74
3.1 Combining research and practice: crafting meso-level theory	74
3.2 Conceptualizing the theoretical framework	76
3.3 Manufacturing an operational craftsmanship theory	77
3.3.1 General operationalization	78
3.3.2 Political and institutional setup	81
3.3.3 Operating system	82
3.3.4 Resources	83
3.3.5 Steering a course	83
3.3.6 Culture	84
3.3.7 Platforming	84
3.3.8 Momentum	85
3.3.9 Dependent variable: ICC	86
3.3.10 Summary: full operationalization	86
3.4 Craftsmanship theory and international development aid	88
3.5 Refining guiding questions into research questions	90
3.6 Summary: Bardach enhanced – a conceptual framework to explore interagency collaboration in international development	92
4. Research design: case study combining observation, documentation and interview techniques	93
4.1 Getting from theory to research methods –and vice versa	93
4.1.1 Methodology: the choice of mindset for the researcher	93

4.1.2 The tools to support the research process from findings to theory	95
4.2 Case study research	95
4.2.1 Case study methodology in management and public administration	95
4.2.2 Criticism and advantages	96
4.2.3 Case study definition	98
4.2.4 Case study production	99
4.2.5 Case analysis, interpretation and presentation	102
4.2.6 Case study validity	106
4.2.7: Summary: case study with documents, observation and interviews	107
4.3 Documentation analysis and participant observation: the first step towards understanding interagency collaboration	107
4.3.1 Observation techniques	108
4.3.2 Challenges and remedies in observational research and documentation analysis	109
4.4 Participatory research, cooperative enquiry and action learning	112
4.5 Interviews to complete the picture	114
4.5.1 Use of interviews as a research method	115
4.5.2 How to conduct an interview	117
4.6 Research ethics	120
4.7 Conclusion: case study research with documentation, participant observation and interviews to explore interagency collaboration	122
5. Presentation of the case study: energy efficiency indicators in Latin America	124
5.1 Case study: United Nations energy efficiency indicators database for Latin America	124
5.2 Application of Bardach's operationalized theory to the case	127
5.3 The use of research methods in the case study	129
5.3.1 Documentation and participant observation	130
5.3.2 Interviews with a participatory style	132
5.3.3 Ethical considerations researching the project	134
5.4 Conclusion: energy efficiency indicators in Latin America – a case study for interagency collaboration	134
6. Findings during data collection	136
6.1 Data from documentation and observation	136

6.1.1 Political and institutional setup	137
6.1.2 Operating system	139
6.1.3 Resources	143
6.1.4 Steering a course	147
6.1.5 Culture	150
6.1.6 Platforming	152
6.1.7 Momentum	154
6.1.8 Additional findings from documents and observation	155
6.1.9 Dependent variable: ICC	156
6.1.10 Summary: the findings from observation and document analysis	158
6.2 Data from interviews	159
6.2.1 Political and institutional setup	159
6.2.2 Operating system	162
6.2.3 Resources	169
6.2.4 Steering a course	173
6.2.5 Culture	178
6.2.6 Platforming	181
6.2.7 Momentum	185
6.2.8 Additional findings from the interviews	186
6.2.9 Dependent variable: ICC	189
6.2.10 Summary: the findings from the interviews	192
6.3 Conclusions on the findings from the case study	193
7. Interpretation and discussion of findings	195
7.1 Political and institutional setup	195
7.2 Operating system	197
7.3 Resources	201
7.4 Steering a course	206
7.5 Culture	208
7.6 Platforming	211
7.7 Momentum	213
7.8 Additional elements –cross-boundary culture and power	214
7.9 Dependent variable: ICC	217

7.10 Revised theoretical framework: how interagency collaboration in international development aid works	219
7.11 Smart practices	224
7.12 Capacity, process and craftsmanship	225
7.13 Conclusion: the revised framework of Bardach's theory to answer the research questions	226
8. Conclusion: the revised interagency collaboration framework for international development –a concept for research and practice	228
8.1 Result: a concept for interagency collaboration in international development	228
8.2 Validity and generalization: a concept with potential	229
8.3 Contributions and limitations: an integrative concept	231
8.4 Future research and practical application: expanding the concept	233
